Donor support helped Eric find safety and start over.

Eric, originally from Venezuela, saw his life upended by political unrest. In 2016, he was kidnapped just outside his own home, a warning that made it clear he could no longer stay.

Determined to protect his family, Eric fled the country, moving through four different countries over the course of a year before finally reaching Canada. His son took his own separate, equally difficult path, escaping alone.

With everything familiar and part of his family left behind, Eric faced an uncertain future in a country he'd never called home. He turned to the NB Refugee Clinic, funded by United Way, unsure of how he would rebuild a life from nothing.

Thanks to donations through United Way, our partner agency is able to provide newcomers like Eric and his son with the everyday support they need, from settlement services and language help to housing and job placement.
